Anava Corporation

Intends to become the leading supplier of a new class of tools for investment analysis and risk management. We apply advanced analysis techniques to give our customers far better performance and ease of use than competing products.

Our targeted customers are financial services companies who can supply our products as value-added services to end users.

For market validation, we are test marketing our first product directly to individual and professional value investors. From this entry niche, we will build a line of products for institutional investors and investment advisors, then a line of products for general risk management.

We are presently located in the San Jose Software Business Cluster.

Machine Intelligence And Investing

Anava Corporation uses hybrid technology incorporating elements of rule-based systems, fuzzy logic, and non-parametric analysis. However, we have a unique way of applying these technologies:

- •Rule #1 Machines aren't intelligent.
- •Rule #2 People are intelligent.
- •Rule #3 Machines are very fast, very precise, and don't get bored.
- •Rule #4 Unintelligent speed and precision isn't good for much.
- •Rule #5 Intelligence that's too late and based on insufficient data isn't good for much either.

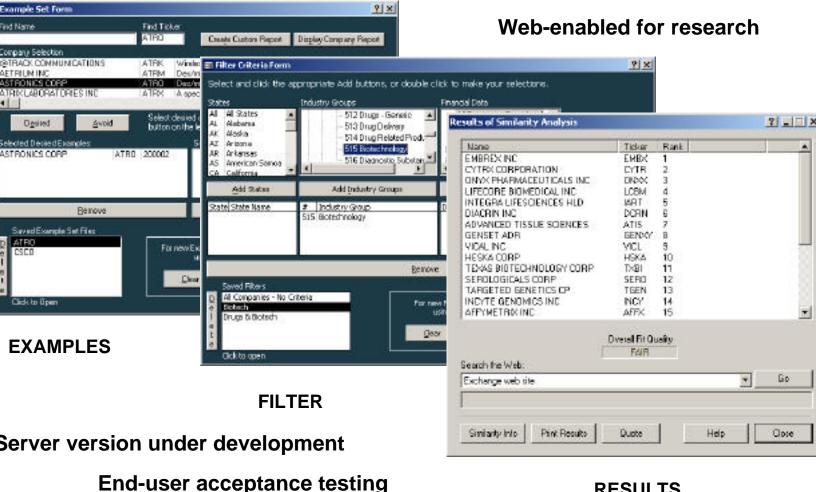

Conclusion

Machines and people working together are the way to go!

Present Business Priorities

We need:

- Individual and professional investors who choose their own stocks based at least in part on fundamental analysis to participate in our market validation program.
- Financial services companies who are willing to fund development of applications tailored to their needs, in return for the opportunity to be the first to provide this new technology to their customers and employees.
- Investment professionals who are interested in advisory board and board of directors positions.
- Potential investors in Anava Corporation.
